Dear John:-

I am very thankful for your esteemed letter, which did help to some extent, but would rather have seen you. I looked and waited in vain, but my John was not to be seen, but knowing now that he was tired, he is excused. Don't forget to-morrow right?

Last night was to Choir practicing, but was unable to sing. Have you a remedy that will cure barking? But please don't refer ~~to~~ to anything on Dave's order?

The painters are at work down town now, so to-morrow we are all going to home. How I would wish ~~it~~ it was a day that you could stay home also, Wouldn't I be happy.

I notice that another party is coming on. Am glad you have concluded not to attend and that you said, "no" for I would not go. I have no use for a crowd that at one time invites me, and then turns around and invites you without asking me, knowing that we keep company.
Now don't forget Friday night, not only am I willing to see you, but I have something for a little remembrance on your mother's birthday I want ^{you} to take home "

With love, I remain

Your own
Rich.
