

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

OFFICE OF INSPECTOR OF FACTORIES AND WORKSHOPS,
NEW ERA BUILDING,
CHICAGO, ILL., Dec. 15, 1900.

To His Excellency, HON. JOHN R. TANNER, Governor of the State of Illinois.

DEAR SIR:—I have the honor to submit herewith the eighth annual report of the Inspectors of Factories and Workshops for the year ending December 15, 1900.

Very respectfully yours,

LOUIS ARRINGTON,
Inspector of Factories and Workshops.

832715

REPORT OF INSPECTOR OF FACTORIES AND WORKSHOPS.

To His Excellency, HON. JOHN R. TANNER, Governor of the State of Illinois.

GOVERNOR:—In accordance with section nine (9) of the act creating the factory and workshop inspector's office, I have the honor to lay before you in behalf of this department the eighth annual report of the work done, with such recommendations of additional legislation as my experience in enforcing the law has shown to be urgently required.

I would respectfully recommend the enactment of the law relating to bakeries and confectioneries as recommended in my report of 1899, pages 13-14.

I would also recommend the enactment of the law relating to wearing apparel and cigars as recommended in my report of 1899, pages 14-15.

The statistical tables of this report will show the growth of the work of this department.

CHILD-LABOR.

The experience of the inspectors of Illinois and of the other principal manufacturing States has shown the necessity of broader, more thorough and more efficient child-labor laws than those now in force in this State. While all our reports have remarked the decrease of child-labor, resulting from the laws of 1892 and 1897, they have also repeatedly pointed out the weakness of the present method of preventing child-labor under the age of fourteen, the numerical insufficiency of the present force of inspectors, and the total collapse of the other clauses of the law, which aim to protect the health of the children and to forbid their work at those occupations "whereby their limbs are in danger or their health likely to be injured or their morals depraved."

The child-labor laws aim at two things: A prohibition of employment in certain occupations of children under fourteen years of age, and the protection of children above that age. In the first aim, the law has been only partially successful; in the second, it has been a complete failure. Both objects are based on the principle that public policy demands the regulation of the employment of the physically, mentally and morally immature who are, therefore, at the same time economically, legally and in a political sense, dependent. The amendment and extension of our child-labor laws demand no new principle of legislation in Illinois, have for their precedent the laws of the leading manufacturing States, are in harmony with the policy of the common law and with the constitution of the United States and of Illinois as interpreted by the Supreme Court of this State. But as the whole subject has not been treated at any length in this report for several years, it will be of value briefly to review it here before going on to point out the defects and insufficiency of our present laws and the remedies suggested by the experience of this department.

EXTENT OF CHILD-LABOR.

The extent and nature of the employment of children is well indicated by the State Factory and Labor Reports, and by the reports of the United States Department of Labor. It is everywhere and conclusively shown that those States which have restricted the employment of children to certain ages have thereby lessened the total number employed. This is in marked contrast with those States which have no such enactment. In these latter the increase in the number of children employed is striking. In South Carolina the census of 1890 showed that 10.25 per cent of all the working people were children under fifteen years of age, and in North Carolina the number of such children reached 14.10 per cent of the total. The census figures for those States that have enacted child-labor laws, were in no case greater than 3.07 per cent, but, at the same time, there has everywhere been shown a natural tendency of child-labor to increase faster than the population, except at those times and places where it has been temporarily checked by adverse legislation.

In Illinois a greater proportion of all the children over fourteen years of age in the whole State is annually employed in her industries and mercantile institutions. The total for the last four years is as follows:

Year.	No. children employed.
1897	9,259
1898	11,845
1899	13,646
1900	14,356

The increase during 1898 was 27.9 per cent, during 1899 the increase was 15.2 per cent, and in 1900 it was 5.4 per cent, although the real increase during this latter year is undoubtedly greater than the number obtained from the inspection record. The average rate of increase is much greater than that of the population or of the total number of children between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years. The increase might be accounted for largely by the increased amount of general employment.

In showing the natural tendency of child labor to increase, it is important to look outside of our own State, because industrial tendencies are usually spread over a wide territory and, while one state may form a temporary exception, in the long run is sure to follow the general rule for the country or section in which it is located.

The special investigation of child labor ordered by the LIII Congress, showed a great increase in the number of child workers during the period 1885-1896, notwithstanding the fact that the establishments covered were situated in states that had enacted several child-labor and compulsory educational laws during that period. In the 931 establishments examined, while the number of males of 18 years or over increased 63.1 per cent, the number of males under 18 years of age increased 80.6 per cent; and while the number of females of 18 years or over increased 66.3 per cent, the number under 18 years of age increased 89.1 per cent. The census of 1890, as compared with the previous census, has been supposed by some to show a different result, but as the age for children was lowered by the census schedule of 1890 so as to include only those under 14½ years of age, instead of those under 16 as previously, the results are useless, especially in those states where the age limit had been raised by law to 13 and 14 years, thus leaving only those children between these ages and 14½ to be enumerated.

The factory reports of the other States show the same tendency of child-labor to increase, except when a new law or a more rigid enforcement of the old ones have taken the children out of the factories or shops or put them into the schools. On account of the fluctuations in trade, adults are sometimes more rapidly absorbed into the industries than children, so that the percentage of children to adults may during such periods be lowered; but it is usually found that the number of children employed has increased more than the total number of children of the same age in the community.

Seventy-five per cent of the children employed in the factories and mercantile establishments of Illinois are at work in Chicago. The nature of the employment in which the greatest number of children are occupied in this city is shown from the record of inspection by this department:

Of the children working in the metal trades, the largest number are employed in the tin can factories. There is also a considerable number working at the making of cores for castings in the harvesting machine companies and the manufacture of such articles as screws, tacks, springs, etc. In five of the largest can factories alone 254 boys under 16 are employed.

In the wood-working trades the principal employments are box-making and work in the picture frame and furniture establishments. It will be noticed that the textile trades are absent. It was principally of these trades that the apologists said that they were especially adapted to children, both because the work was not too severe for their strength and because the children were more skillful than adults at certain operations involved. Not only are these trades absent here, but others demanding a good deal of child-labor, such as cigars and boots and shoes, do not occupy a position of much relative importance. On the other hand a trade so manifestly unsuited to children as beef and hog slaughtering and packing uses a considerable number.

Outside of Chicago the principal employment of children is in the glass companies. The Illinois Glass Co. of Alton, employs 312, and there is a considerable number in some of the other glass works. There is also a cotton mill in Aurora of some importance and knitting mills in Rockford which employ a good many children, but they do not make up a very large part of the total for the State. All of these employments are of significance in connection and with what is said of them below.

CAUSES OF CHILD-LABOR.

That we have in our State and country such an army of child-workers would suggest to many the existence of some deep underlying cause representing such industrial and individual necessities that it would be perilous to restrict it in any marked degree by legislation. And it must be acknowledged that both our industrial organizations and our economic institutions, forbid easy generalizations or hasty remedial legislation—whatever may be the evils resulting from children's work. There are several considerations, however, which seem to show that child-labor in its present form is neither economically necessary nor suited to American social traditions and political institutions.

It is not customary for American-born workmen to put their children into the factories at an early age. They are believers in our educational system and realize the inconsistency of educational ideal with factory labor for immature children. Only in cases of great want do they allow their children to work until they have at least completed their common school education, and then it is usually to seek employment for them in a store, to teach them a trade or to find work for them at an occupation where something is to be learned and advancement is possible. With the immigrants, among whom the vast bulk of our child-labor is to be found, the case is entirely different. In their European lives, child-labor was both a custom and a necessity, which they are slow to change even when meeting with improved conditions in this country. Among certain races, it is almost an invariable rule, whatever the condition of the parents, to withdraw the children from school at the earliest possible age and set them to work. That this is a fact, may be shown both by comparing the attendance of the schools in the American and in the foreign districts and by the nationality of the children who are at work, which is well-known to the Factory Inspectors. As will be shown later, a large number of such children are known to come from families in no special need and sometimes even in comfortable circumstances. In this way the American standard is lowered and both American and foreign workers injured through a cause having no relation to the needs either of industry or of the individual.

Another cause, which seems inconsistent with the general welfare, is due to a natural demand on the part of the employers for additional help in those trades in which there are great seasonal or trade fluctuations. The late Wisconsin report on child-labor says: "Experience seems to confirm that increased business activity, or demand for labor, often causes the employment of an unduly large proportion of children. An explanation of this can probably be found in the fact that in many manufacturing places additional help can be more easily obtained from the ranks of children than from adult workers. In times of business expansion therefore it is only natural that children should be employed whenever they can be used to advantage, and particularly if adult-labor is scarce."

When a period of great business activity approaches, the factories are run over-time and at night, more men and women are employed, until finally every corner of the community must be explored for new recruits. In such a period the most immature and inexperienced are drafted with less regard than usual for individual welfare, only again to be discharged when the height of the season is passed. It is largely for this reason that the stores and tailor shops employ such great numbers of children at certain periods, while at others the total is so materially reduced. For the individual employer this policy is a necessity on account of the competition of others, but in most cases a restriction of the number of children at the disposal of all employers alike would not be injurious to the trade as a whole. Not only can we see the importance of this cause from the known fluctuation of those trades where the children are employed, but the employers themselves have laid stress upon it as, for instance, in the child-labor report of Wisconsin for 1900. The special evil connected with this kind of child-labor are too obvious to need elaboration here.

Undoubtedly there are many operations in industry that demand the whole attention of an individual, but will not completely occupy an adult worker. Under proper restrictions, the use of young persons in such trades is an important social economy, but in those other occupations where the children replace fully occupied adults, the gain to the individual employer may have no social justification since there has been no saving in labor force. If the misplaced adults are not re-employed, there is the obvious anomaly of men and women idle, while the children are at work. The reports show this frequently to have been the situation during the last industrial depression. As Mr. W. F. Willoughby, of the United States Department of Labor said in a paper before the American Economic Association, "A number of states have made a careful collection of statistics of those out of employment and from these it is found that a much larger number of adults than of children are unemployed."

The great cause of child-labor in the popular mind is the sheer need of a sustenance on the part of the child or its family. The sad condition of widows and orphans without other means of support has served in the minds of some to condemn all attempts at restriction of child-labor. This feeling is due not only to an under-estimate of the evils connected with all child-labor, but also to ignorance of the real condition in the families of the child-workers. The Connecticut bureau of labor made in 1893 extensive inquiries among employers as to the advisability of raising the legal minimum for child-labor. Only a minority of the manufacturers opposed the raise and these almost entirely on the ground of hardship on the child or its family. A similar prevalence of this opinion has been found in other states, and the importance of arriving at the facts of the case can not be over-estimated. The proportion of child-workers whose fathers are dead or incapable of work has been exaggerated. The Ohio bureau of labor examined in 1894 946 child-workers. In only 287 cases, or 30 per cent of the children had the father either died, become an invalid or deserted his family. Even in the stores, which attract the child of American as well as of foreign parents, the per cent is much higher, and in the factories is considerably less. In the Illinois investigation of the Chicago department stores made by order of the Legislature in 1895, 302 children were examined. In only 107 cases was the father either dead or disabled or had he deserted the family. And when the head of the family has been removed it must be remembered that the mother or older brothers and sisters contribute considerably towards its support. In 38 fatherless families examined in Wisconsin, there were 45 wage-earners older than the child of 14 or thereabouts, who was the cause of the investigation. Seventeen of these families made from $200 to over $500 a year, which is above the average considering the reduced size of the family. Some of them were clearly supported by outside aid, so that in a very large part of them the earnings of the child were not indispensable.

It has been further contended that the earnings of the children are necessary to the proper support of many families where the father is still alive and at work. There seems to be some misapprehension here also. The Wisconsin bureau of labor published this year a report in which 381 families are tabulated as to the earnings and employment of every member. Of these families only 67 have an aggregate income of less than $446; 121 families averaged over $700. The majority of the families were prosperous and a large number owned their own homes and other properties. Need will account for only a small part of the total number of children employed. As in the above mentioned instances, there are generally others than the father and the child employed, the average number at work being nearly three for each family. Moreover, the average contribution of the child was only $105 out of an average for the whole family of $593. There can be no doubt that the earnings of the children are often insufficient for their own support. Those industries which employ this class of help are clearly partly supported by the earnings of the other members of the family who are in turn often employed at another trade. Such industries are then parasites on the other trades where the adults are employed. Similar wages to the above have been found to prevail in other States. In Michigan the bureau found an average wage of $2.04, and states that the employment seldom lasts the year around, and that, "There is often a change of employment wasting weeks of time in seeking another place, and leaving no definite knowledge or skill in any one department." The same thing has been noticed in Illinois. Our reports have repeatedly mentioned the migration of children from one place to another, sometimes to spend only a few weeks or even days at their new occupation. The only official investigation of children's wages in this State was undertaken by the Legislative Commission in 1895 on child-labor in the department stores. The average wages, after deducting actual expenditures on car-fare, unavoidable for many in this occupation, was $2.03 per week. It is evident from this, that the annual wages would have averaged considerably less than $100, which taking into consideration the minimum of neatness in dress, required in these stores, is hardly enough for independent maintenance.

The Wisconsin report showed a smaller range in wages of children than in those of adults, yet there are the greatest differences in productivity between child and child-differences between the two sexes, differences in physical and mental maturity, differences between the beginner, turning for the first time in his life to rigid discipline, and the older child to whom his work has become a habit. As the differences in wages are so small, we can only infer that the children are paid not so much according to what they can do as according to what they will take. As they have a lesser power of resistance, and since their parents know less about the children's labor value than their own, the child's wages are practically determined by the family's standard of living, a fact of the most far-reaching importance. Investigations have proved this assumption, for it has been found that, in those districts where child-labor prevails, the contribution of the children is partly balanced by a corresponding loss in the income of the adults of the family. Mr. Willoughby says in the address above quoted, "The father can not work for less than that which will furnish himself and his family a living, if he alone were allowed to work; but if his children also can work, in his desperate struggle for existence, he will work for just so much less as his children can earn; as on the gross earnings the family can in this way live at the standard to which they have been accustomed." It has also been shown in Connecticut, that among the textile mills where women and children work, the earnings of the entire family are no larger than in other industries in Western Connecticut where only the men work. Mr. George Gunton verifies this conclusion from the statistics of the sixth annual report of the Massachusetts bureau of labor. Shop workers, metal workers, and workers in the building trades, receive less than $100 per family for women and children but the family income averaged over $800. Indoor and outdoor laborers, on the other hand, received an average of more than $250 from the women and children, but the average family income was $100 less than in the other class of workers, that is to say the aggregate family income was less than $700. The families that have found employment for their children, are nevertheless, worse off than those that rely principally on the labor of the adults. In other states where child-labor prevails to a lesser degree, the difference between the earnings of the men of the two classes is less. That the employment tends to lower the wages of adults has been repeatedly noticed in every country and trade where child-labor prevails, until it has become an axiom in the ab or world.

Of those individual cases where the employment of children does seem to afford some relief, we can only say with Commissioner Erickson of Wisconsin, "For a poor family the feeling is often so strong, that both individuals and society are silently permitting the future of the child to be jeopardized for the sake of the immediate assistance it may render the family. Such cases, particularly when chronic, should be relieved in some other way than by the struggling of the little ones who are in no way responsible for the condition."

An examination of the underlying causes of child-labor will show then no general or natural defense for the system, while the specific evils connected with it are of a most vital significance, involving as they do the happiness and character of a very large number of our future citizens and the fitness of the republic to keep its position among the nations.

EFFECTS OF CHILD LABOR.

The injurious results of child-labor fall alike on the employer, the children, the working people and the whole community. When it was proposed in Connecticut to raise the age limit by one year, the bureau of labor instituted extensive enquiries among manufacturers, school superintendents, physicians and workmen as to their opinion on the proposed change. Out of sixty-nine manufacturers forty-two favored the raise while only twenty-seven opposed it. The principal reason offered by the former was the welfare of the State, while the latter feared the raise on the ground of hardship to the employes. But this fear was not shared by the workmen themselves, since nineteen out of twenty-one favored the raise of the age limit. Twenty-nine out of thirty-six superintendents and twenty-six out of thirty-one physicians favored the raise. In Wisconsin 164 employers out of 212 favored the new law fixing the age limit at 14 years, and while fourteen were for a lower limit than this, sixteen were for a higher one. One of the employer's letters puts the case of the majority so well that it is worthy of quotation at length. (See Wisconsin report on child labor, 1900, page 370.) "While our work is such that we can employ children to advantage and for this reason it would be to our immediate interest to do so, we recognize the fact that early employment is not likely to result in the best class of men and women. This problem, therefore, involves the welfare not only of the children themselves but of the state. It also seems to us that in the long run the interest of the employers lie in an efficient working class. For these reasons we would say that the law as it stands is a step in the right direction. Understand that similar laws have been enacted and are enforced in other manufacturing states. Since this is the case, this law can not justly be complained of here. We may, as employers, have a right to ask for as many privileges in this line as other states afford, but we certainly can not, at the expense of society, demand any more than this. Speaking from a purely business point of view we should be glad enough to employ children, particularly at certain kinds of work. From the standpoint of society, as a whole, we will say that a uniform law for all manufacturing states, under which no child under fifteen could be employed and which compelled school attendance up to this age would be preferable to the present laws. If we are ever to reach the industrial supremacy predicted for us, it can only be because of a superior industrial class. Such a class can nowhere be had without the most careful bringing up. Many employers overlook this. Circumstances are also often such that they are forced to disregard ultimate for immediate results. The State, however, can not afford to be unmindful of future requirements of the growing race no matter what individuals may think. As a student of industrial problems I have often watched the effect of employment upon young children and thus speak from experience. Fourteen years ought to be the minimum age limit, and until eighteen no young person should be allowed to work more than ten hours in any one day. The school laws should be so amended as to be in full harmony with the factory laws."

Injury to the adult workers results from child-labor in two different ways; first as has been pointed out, the standard of living of the family is lowered. More work is being done on the whole, without a corresponding increase in family income. This means a lack of attention to home comforts and home training, which is sure to have a deteriorating effect on the whole family. As is said in the Wisconsin report: "The income through the earnings of children is often offset by a decrease in the earnings of the father. On the part of the father child labor offers opportunities for shiftlessness. It also has a tendency to make him less on the alert in looking out for his own interests as a wage earner. If the employment of children tended to raise the standard of living, as a whole, of the families affected, there might be something to say in its favor, but of such tendency there is little or no evidence."

But there is besides, active competition between men and women and the children. In the long run, as slack seasons and periods of depression come and go, the wages of adults are certain to be depressed in this way. Even in good times a certain amount of unemployment always prevails, as our labor bulletins have shown, and there is often, therefore, competition between adults and children for the same position. In hard times a worse condition arises; while men and women are unemployed in large numbers, the less expensive children are retained. Those best adapted to labor are idle while the less fitted are at work.

The first evils from child-labor fall on the children themselves and it is through their injury for the most part, that the family, the working people, industry and the State are affected. All inquiries seem to have shown that in this climate the average child is immature in every way at least until he reaches the age of 16, while on many important sides of his physical nature maturity arrives several years later. In 1893 Professor William Townsend Porter made a most exhaustive study of the school children of St. Louis. Over 35,000 were examined and 500,000 measurements taken and scientifically arranged. An approximate idea of the time of reaching maturity may be gathered from this investigation—the complete tables are given in the report of this department for 1894. The girls seem to gain their full height at about 18, the boys after 19. The same thing holds true of weight and girth of chest. The length and width of the head increases rapidly even after this period. The investigation made by Dr. Christopher for the Chicago School Board in 1899, besides verifying Professor Townsend's results, showed that the intellectual capacity of children varied with their physical condition, but universal observation would itself seem to justify the conclusion that the average young man is neither physically nor mentally mature before 19 nor the average young woman before she has reached the age of 18.

Physicians also recognize a critical period for girls of about the ages of fourteen and fifteen and for boys at a somewhat later date. When this period is passed the young people are able to endure without injury many things that would have been disastrous during that time. At this time, for instance, as Dr. Christopher's report shows, growth becomes much more slow, while strength and vital power increase very rapidly. Here we have, then, the physical and mental basis for regulation of child-employment, and can not ignore the inevitable evil which must arise from allowing it to grow without restriction. The moral evils are, of course, based largely on these same facts, but, while as important as any, are less amenable to scientific treatment and can be seen only in the result of child-labor itself. The examination of child-workers undertaken by this department in 1894 indicated distinct physical deterioration, although only the weaker were examined. A comparison may be made with the weakest children of other investigations. Accordingly it was found that while "the smallest boy of fourteen ought to be fifty-six inches tall weigh eighty pounds and have a chest-measurement of thirty inches, the smallest boy examined was forty-nine inches tall, weighed fifty-seven pounds, and measured twenty-five and one-half inches around the chest.

The deteriorating effects of premature labor prevail in a wide range of occupation even where special dangers are absent. Many operations are more readily learned in early years, but for the same reason the danger of over-strain and over-use are greater and the results more severe. Over-use of the eyes and strain of the muscular and nervous system are wide-spread, besides deformation of the bones and of the details of the structure of the joints. Mr. Arbutnot Lane says: "For the so-called normal condition of the skeleton, it is necessary that during growing life the individual shall combine attitudes of activity with attitudes of rest, and that the attitudes of activity as well as those of rest be varied in character." Arlidge says of over-exertion in all its forms, that, "The mischief attending it is greater and more serious when the frame is young and immature." Of sedentary labor, which is of course especially injurious for undeveloped bodies, the same authority says: "The want of exercise of the body induces general torpidity of function; reduces lung capacity and respiratory completeness and the activity of the muscles which aid both respiration and the functions of the digestive organs. Hence the proclivity to venous stasis particularly in the pelvis and lower extremities and in the rectal vessels, with the production of constipation and piles, and in women of menstrual irregularities. Add to these disorders of digestion in their multiform shape, debilitated muscular power and a low vitality and vigor generally." The widely prevalent dusts and lack of fresh air are also especially injurious to children, as are the result of long standing and the nervous strain of watching some machines. Moreover, the moral and social environment of the child-worker bring about actions and habits which in their turn profoundly affect the health.

A long working day, besides increasing many of these evils in an ascending ratio, falls most heavily upon the children. Not only do their bodies and minds tire sooner than those of older persons, but their need of rest and recreation is much greater. Now that the value of play in the child's life has been recognized, it would seem unnecessary to urge that the factory hours should not be such as practically to leave no time or energy for the minimum of relaxation needed.

But there are many trades and operations in industry involving such dangers and make them exceptionally unsuited to children. In his work on the "Hygiene Diseases and Mortality of Occupations," Dr. Arlidge treats the dangerous trades at length, as do also the reports of the British factory inspector and of the Parliamentary committees on the dangerous trades. A limited investigation by this department in 1894 found similar results among the child-workers of this State. In almost every industry where lead is used, danger arises from lead poisoning. Among such trades are: Manufacture of white lead and other paints, making of earthenware and china, lead smelting, file cutting, glass-polishing, enameling and tinning. Other chemical poisons have been found to work serious injury in the manufacture of paints and colors and chemicals, in paper staining, coloring and enameling, in dyeing with certain dyes, in the use of certain powders in lithographic work and in the casting of several metals. In other trades, anthrax or lock-jaw is so common as to be an incident. Such trades are: Wool-sorting, the handling of hides and skins, brush-making, a number of processes in wool, the grinding of rags, flock-making, etc. From other trades the danger arises from injurious dusts as in china scouring, silk combing, and the use of grindstones and emery wheels. Other processes are dangerous because they require a sudden change from great heat to cold and vice versa, such as laquering and japanning, galvanizing of iron, the making of cores, the melting and annealing of glass, and work carried on where furnaces are in use or in the foundry. Still other processes require an artificial humidity which may be exceedingly dangerous. Illustrations are to be found in many textile processes. It is impossible even to summarize the diseases and injuries that result from all these processes. It is enough that they are all of a most serious nature and have become the cause of special legislation, after extensive and indeed exhaustive inquiries. It is equally unnecessary to point out the peculiar injuriousness to children of occupations in which adults are not able to retain their health and strength.

Besides the above mentioned trades, there are other occupations not exactly dangerous, but which have elements undoubtedly harmful to the child worker. Arlidge says that the steam laundry is most unfit for the weak and anaemic. The temperature changes favor greatly the development of bronchitis and similar trouble, and the moisture increases the danger from tuberculosis. Injurious dusts are produced in many kinds of wood-turning, as well as in the bone and ivory trade. Sand-papering after turning has been shown to favor consumption and dyspepsia. Artificial flower making was shown in an exhaustive paper by Inspector Nash, of New York, to involve the use of many injurious substances. Young tobacco workers are subject to nicotine poisoning. The more or less volatile poison produces a marked effect on susceptible persons. A medical writer says: "The deleterious effects are exerted on the brain, the spinal cord and that portion of the nervous system also which regulates the movement of the blood vessels and to some extent the cell changes to which the nutrition is maintained and the waste carried away." Book-binding, a common occupation for young girls, shows a high rate of mortality from consumption and diseases of the respiratory organs. The forty-fifth annual report of the British Registrar showed that 39 per cent of the deaths in this trade were due to the former and 16 to the latter cause, very abnormal percentages in both cases. Street peddlers and sellers, through their precarious existence, exposure to the weather, and prolonged standing in the open air, are extraordinarily subject to mortality from certain causes. The report just quoted shows that their death rate compared with the average to be as 475 is to 220 from consumption and as 420 is to 182 from diseases of the respiratory organs, besides a very heavy rate of circulatory and nervous diseases. But, of course, the more important evil to children in this trade is the moral contamination.

Some trades, while not possessing a single evil to a pronounced degree, are made unwholesome by the concurrence of several unhygienic conditions. Of tailoring, Dr. Arlidge says: "Confinement indoors and when the work is done in the artisan's house, largely in wretched, unsanitary and often over-crowded apartments, the frequent necessary use of artificial light and the emission of heat in the operation of pressing; in these conditions we find an array of disease-producing factors not often surpassed." The previous reports of this department have exposed thoroughly the conditions prevailing in these shops in Chicago, and have also expressed the opinion that they can not be entirely removed, although they could be partly remedied by legislation. Indigestion, rheumatism, constipation and consumption are common, and with women uterine complaints, retarded and arrested development and general debility. Dr. Ord, of the British Local Government Board, says that the women in this trade undergo a slow but well-marked physical deterioration, "And," says Arlidge, "the ills attending the business are especially felt in the earlier years of employment."

The special effect of some of these trades on children was shown in the report of this department for 1894. Of 36 children examined from the "sweat shops," 8 had spinal curvature; of 20 from the tobacco factories, 5 had enlarged glands; of 12 from the cutlery trade, 5 had enlarged glands, two had tuberculosis and two spinal curvature; of 7 from a feather duster factory, 2 had enlarged glands; of 18 from a candy factory 3 had skin disease, etc. These children were all examined on account of their unhealthy appearance, but the results are, nevertheless, somewhat startling. A reference to the table of employments will show those of the above trades and the others previously mentioned that employ children to any considerable extent in this city, and it is at least worthy of investigation to find out whether the same diseases prevail here as elsewhere.

Even in the most wholesome employments and the most careful houses serious evils may prevail in the stores where superficial observation finds nothing injurious, mortality lists show a high rate of death from nervous and respiratory diseases, and in females the long standing is productive of derangement of the uterine functions and of uterine displacements; though it seems comparatively easy to remedy these abuses by the enactment of the law already generally adopted requiring seats to be furnished for the female employés, as previously recommended in the reports of this department.

Dangers from machinery being of a more violent and sensational order are more generally known. The accidents from saws, elevators, unguarded holes and shafts are thoroughly recognized by the public though it does not in the least comprehend the wide extent and variety of such perils, which is evident by the thousands of devices for protection for machinery that are in use, though of course in the absence of any legal enactment there is no guarantee of the use of the best device or indeed in numberless cases of any protection at all. There is hardly a factory which does not use some dangerous machinery; in the larger ones a company doctor and a lawyer for damage cases have been found necessary and in a few of the largest private hospitals have proved themselves a necessity. The reports of this department have called attention to some of the accidents to children as in stamping work and in the operation of elevators. A report of the Minnesota bureau of labor demonstrates conclusively the special risks run by children. "From the data in this report it is shown that of the male operators one in sixty was hurt, and one in 1,379 was killed by factory accidents. Of boys under 16, one was hurt in every thirty-eight employés, and one was killed for every 189 employed. No female operative was killed; one woman over 16 was hurt for every 1,044 employed, and one girl under 16 to every thirty-two employed. Of the females over 16 who were hurt, all but one were under 21 years.

"The figures show that the girls under 16 have thirty-three times the probability of being hurt as those over 16, and that practically all accidents to female factory operatives befall the young and inexperienced; those who are unable to measure or apprehend the hazard of operating a dangerous machine. The figures also show that a boy in a Minnesota factory has a probability of accident about twice that of an adult; and that his chance of fatal accident is over seven times as great as that of a grown man.

"Some people speak of accidents to young children as due to carelessness. They thereby seek to throw the responsibility for such casualties upon the children. Maybe the child is careless. But when a boy's chance of death from dangerous machinery is seven times as great as that of a man, and when the chance of accident is thirty-three times greater for girls under 16 than for those over that age, the State should prohibit the employment of all boys and girls at dangerous occupations."

The sapping of moral energy, the danger of moral contamination and the formation of vicious habits are, of course, much greater with the very young than with those nearing maturity. The extent of this kind of harm is not easy to estimate, though it is, perhaps, as important as the physical injuries. In his instructions to the grand jury, Judge Gibbons said, speaking of the vice and crime of Chicago, "Intelligent observation and truth searching investigation of the social and moral conditions forces the conviction that child-labor and the penurious pay of shop and factory girls, aggravated by long hours of exhaustive service, are largely creative of the increasing immorality in our large cities." The reports of this and other factory departments have not failed to point out instances of irretrievable damage to both boys and girls, though of course, complete and conclusive evidence is impossible. That the necessity of State intervention has been recognized when "the morals of children are likely to be depraved," is shown by the use of this phrase in several state laws, especially by that generally adopted law which forbids the employment of children at certain specific tasks.

Advocates of child-labor have contended that valuable physical dexterity and manual training is generally secured by the child-worker. No doubt this is sometimes the case, but an examination of the operations carried on by the children will show that the very minimum of dexterity is required in most of them, and that the fewest number offer any variety of labor. The Wisconsin report says, "All kinds of labor are not equally injurious to a child. Farming, for instance, is carried on in the open air and brings those engaged in it in touch with nature. This in itself has a liberalizing effect. The learning of a trade is perhaps the next best thing to a good schooling. When carried on moderately, work of this nature may be even of much benefit to strong and healthy boys. Factory and mine labor, however, under all the conditions of labor, has no such redeeming features. In these occupations no opportunities are offered for learning a trade or to acquire any particular skill in special duties."

One of the employers says in this same report, "Even when the duties of the children are light, the hours are usually long, and in our opinion there is little or no relation between long hours of confining employment and such exercise as a child needs for growth and development." Not only does the nature of the work usually exclude any valuable technical training, but the instability of employment in different trades and the shifting from one to another, may counteract any benefit that has been derived. In the tailoring trades, the slack season will amount to at least three or four months. During this period, the smaller shops are almost entirely without work and hundreds of children are thrown out of employment. In other kinds of work the period is too brief for much benefit. This is true of those holiday trades which must have extra help during the season. For example, hundreds of children are employed for a week or two or even a few days in the large department stores. A considerable part of the child-workers of this State are found at such occupations and the experience of this department has brought to light besides a remarkable shifting and migration of the children. Through necessity and ignorance, drifting from one trivial occupation to another, many children are actually injured in their capacity for work and habits of industry.

In the light of the purpose and function of our public school system, its immediate successor in the child-life must likewise be of extreme public importance. There is no feature of American civilization that we value more than our public schools. They are the justification for universal suffrage and political liberty, the safe-guard of a nation and the foundation of its prosperity. All the complex and manifold reasons that lead us to uphold and develop the system would likewise demand that its benefits should not be cut short and negatived by premature and injurious labor. These reasons can not even be suggested here, but it is evident that commerce, industry, legislation and administration would go back to barbarism if the care of the young were neglected for a single generation. The prevalence of child-labor goes hand in hand with illiteracy, insufficient schooling and all their degrading consequences. The table prepared by the New York Inspector from the United States census shows a high rate of illiteracy from those states which employ an unusual number of children. The Factory Inspection Reports have likewise discovered an astonishing amount of illiteracy in our large cities where child-labor flourishes. Here it is by no means uncommon to find children who, though they have been in this country for several years, can neither read nor write their own names. This is partly the fault of defective compulsory education and inadequate school funds and partly the fault of the defective child-labor laws. The school census of Chicago for 1900 showed about 34,000 more children between ages of 6 and 14 than were accounted for by the return from the private schools and from the primary and grammar grades of our public school system. The superintendent reports that there were besides 22,000 enrolled children without proper school accommodations. The following table of the ages of pupils in the Chicago public schools in 1898-1899, indicates the period at which education draws to a close in this industrial community.

Between 10 and 11.....	25, 714
Between 11 and 12.....	23, 204
Between 12 and 13.....	22, 590
Between 12 and 14.....	18, 635
Between 14 and 15.....	12, 620
Between 15 and 16.....	6, 030
Between 16 and 17.....	3, 570

Notwithstanding the law forbidding the employment under the age of 14, it is seen that a large number leave school at the age of 13, and the great majority within the next two years. But even in those localities where the school funds are adequate and the school system effective, it is surely a false economy not to follow the children into the factory, work-shop and store with such protective legislation as shall guarantee that the ends aimed at in the school shall not be defeated in these places by the dangers that abound there for immature, inexperienced and dependent children. The prosperity of the country and its economic supremacy are involved in the efficiency of its working people and the necessities of a democracy demand that a great body of its citizens shall not be weakened and degraded while in a dependent and helpless condition.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

The considerations above summarized have been generally recognized in the laws of our leading manufacturing states and of the principal nations of Europe. The legislation needed in this State and recommended below is in no way experimental nor likely to handicap the industries of Illinois. The basic principles have been approved in the present child-labor law and are further recognized by other statutes. Our excellent mining law furnishes a precedent for the complete regulation of a dangerous trade. The laws concerning railway employes and the use of threshing machines are also of a similar nature.

THE PROHIBITION OF THE EMPLOYMENT OF CHILDREN UNDER FOURTEEN YEARS OF AGE.

The first three sections of the law of 1897 have for their purpose the prohibiting the employment of children under 14 years of age in any mercantile institution, store, office, manufacturing establishment, factory, workshop or laundry in the State. They are as follows:

SECTION 1. No child under the age of fourteen years shall be employed, permitted or suffered to work for wages at any gainful occupation hereinafter mentioned.

SEC. 2. It shall be the duty of every person, firm or corporation, agent or manager of any firm or corporation employing minors in any mercantile institution, store, office, laundry, manufacturing establishment, factory or workshop within this State to keep a register in said mercantile establishment, store, office, laundry, manufacturing establishment, factory or workshop, in which said minors shall be employed, or permitted or suffered to work, in which register shall be recorded the name, age and place of residence of every child employed or permitted or suffered to work therein under the age of sixteen years; and it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, agent or manager of any firm or corporation, to hire or employ, or to permit or to suffer to work, in any mercantile institution, store, office, laundry manufacturing establishment, factory or workshop, any child under the age of sixteen years and over the age of fourteen years, unless there is first provided and placed on file in such mercantile institution, office, laundry, manufacturing establishment, factory or workshop an affidavit made by the parent or guardian, stating the name, date and place of birth of such child. If such child shall have no parent or guardian, then such affidavit shall be made by the child. And the register and affidavits herein provided for shall, on demand, be produced and shown for inspection to the State factory inspector assistant State factory inspector, or deputy State factory inspector.

SEC. 3. Every person, firm or corporation, agent or manager of a corporation, employing or permitting or suffering to work, children under the age of sixteen years, and over the age of fourteen years, in any mercantile institution, store, office, laundry, manufacturing establishment, factory or workshop, shall post and keep posted in a conspicuous place in every room in which help is employed, or permitted or suffered to work, a list containing the name, age and place of residence of every person under the age of sixteen years employed, permitted or suffered to work in such room.

The difficulty with the law is the lack of any system whereby the veracity of the affidavits can be ascertained. Neither our system of registry of births or any other legislative measures have afforded reliable means of discovering the real ages of the children. In this State as in others where the system has been in use, it has been suspected that a considerable proportion of affidavits are false. Parents have stated one age to the notary and another to the inspector, and it frequently happens when the inspector asks a child its name and date of birth, it will immediately give an age about a year less than that mentioned in the affidavit. More suspicious still, the child will insist it is right, but the inspector can not go behind the affidavit. Several states have sought to avoid this defect by taking the power to grant affidavits away from the numerous and irresponsible notaries and assigning it to some public authority. In Massachusetts the school authorities were selected, in New York the health authorities were chosen, and in Michigan all affidavits for use in Detroit must be obtained from the inspector there. All these methods have proved themselves superior to that in use in this State. They all leave the matter in the hands of responsible officials who are able to question the parents closely and to record the affidavits issued. The Michigan law suggests itself as being most useful since it leaves the matter in the hands of the inspectors themselves, but has the disadvantage of not applying to the whole State. Formerly the New York law was the same as the present law in this State, but in March, 1895, a special committee, the Reinhardt committee, was appointed by the New York State Legislature to investigate the condition of female labor in New York City. The committee found "large numbers of children employed contrary to law," and reported in part as follows: "The committee stamps the employment of children under the statutory age as one of the most extensive evils now existing in the city of New York, and an evil which is a constant and grave menace to the welfare of its people. * * * Parents and mercenary and corrupt notaries alike connive at the employment of children under the statutory age."

The committee also set forth the fact that the law and the inspectors appointed to enforce the law had been unable to cope with existing evils, and made the following recommendations: "No child under the age of sixteen years shall be permitted to work in any manufacturing establishment unless it first obtains a certificate from the local board of health, stating that such board is satisfied that the child is of the age of fourteen years or upwards and physically able to perform the work in which it desires to engage. Such certificate should contain a description of the child fully adequate for identification, and should not be issued unless the child produce to the board of health a certificate from the school authorities, showing that the compulsory education law of the State of New York has been substantially complied with. A monthly report should be made by local boards of health to the factory inspector, at his principal office, between the first and tenth days of each month, of such certificate issued. It should be unlawful for any proprietor, agent, foreman or other person in or connected with a manufacturing establishment to hire or employ any child between the age of fourteen and sixteen years to work therein without there is first provided and placed on file in the office of the employer a certificate as above described, and the employment without such a certificate should be punishable as a misdemeanor."

As recommended in previous reports, the scope of the law should be extended so as to include peddlers, vendors and newsboys, and the recent opinion of the attorney general seems to make it necessary to add telegraph, telephone and public messengers. As approximately the same reasons hold for including the latter as other classes of child workers and as they are embraced by laws of other states the reasons for these recommendations are apparent. It would probably be advisable to remodel the wording of the law so that all employment of children could be covered except agriculture and home work.

An article of importance to the whole law is the posting of the law itself in the factory or shop for the education of employers and employés. This omission can only be accounted for by the simplicity of the original law, but it is already much needed and will undoubtedly be more necessary in the future. The sections requiring both wall-lists and registers seem unnecessary and are in some cases very difficult of enforcement. It would therefore be advisable that only the register be required as in the state of New York.

EMPLOYMENTS PROHIBITED TO CHILDREN OVER FOURTEEN YEARS OF AGE.

The remaining sections of the law aim to regulate the employment of children over 14 years of age. Section 6 prohibits certain kinds of work as follows: "No child under the age of sixteen years shall be employed, or permitted or suffered to work by any person, firm or corporation in this State at such extra hazardous employment whereby its life or limb is in danger, or its health is likely to be injured, or its morals may be depraved."

The purpose of the law is clear enough but it is ineffective until the hazardous occupations are defined. This has been accomplished in Massachusetts by empowering the governor to designate those trades that are especially dangerous to children. Under this law the inspectors have forbidden with the governor's authority the employment of children at such occupations as the running of circular saws and certain work in glass factories and in the manufacture of white lead and lead pipe. The Ohio inspector has in pursuance of the state law issued the following: "No child under the age of sixteen years shall be employed at sewing belts, or to assist in sewing belts in any capacity whatever; nor shall any such child adjust any belt to any machinery; they shall not oil or assist in oiling, wiping or cleaning machinery; they shall not operate or assist in operating circular or band saws, wood shapers, wood jointers, planers, sandpaper or wood polishing machinery, wood turning or boring machinery, stamping machines in sheet metal and tinware manufacturing, stamping machines in washer and nut factories, operating corrugating rolls, such as are used in roofing or washboard factories; nor shall they be employed in operating any steam boiler, steam machinery or other steam generating apparatus; they shall not operate or assist in operating dough brakes or cracker machinery of any description; wire or iron straightening machinery; nor shall they operate or assist in operating rolling mill machinery, punches or shears, washing, grinding or mixing mills, or calendar rolls in rubber manufacturing; nor shall they operate or assist in operating laundrying machinery; nor shall children be employed in any capacity in preparing composition for matches, or dipping, dyeing, or packing matches; they shall not be employed in any capacity in the manufacture of paints, colors or white lead; nor shall they be employed in any capacity whatever in operating or assisting to operate any passenger or freight elevator; nor shall they be employed in any capacity whatever in the manufacture of goods for immoral purposes, or any other employment that may be considered dangerous to their lives and limbs, or where their health may be injured or morals depraved; nor shall females under sixteen years of age be employed in any capacity where such employment compels them to remain standing constantly."

A New York law forbids the employment of young persons under eighteen at polishing and buffing with dry emery wheels, while a number of the states have statutes forbidding the employment of children to run elevators or to clean machinery while in motion.

Though the older states of this country are as a rule more advanced in the protection of children than in other factory legislations, in this matter of the dangerous trades the European countries are ahead of us. In Belgium after a most exhaustive investigation and an examination of the industrial as well as of the hygienic aspect of the situation, sixty-five trades were closed to children under sixteen and twenty of these also to females under twenty-one. Italy, Norway and Sweden have extended lists of such forbidden trades; Germany condemns certain processes in the manufacture of India rubber, glass, wire, sugar, textiles, bricks and tiles and in forges and rolling mills; Great Britain forbids the employment of children in mercurial and lead processes and in the melting and annealing of glass. The law of Germany also forbids the employment of young persons under 18 years of age, except when certain "special precautions are taken for the preservation of their health and their protection against accident and immoral influences." According to the French law women and children can not be employed in unhealthy or dangerous establishments where the laborer is exposed to operations or emanations detrimental to health, except under special conditions, as determined by the regulations of the government. The government is also given the power to forbid absolutely, by order, the employment of women and children in work involving danger, a too great expenditure of strength, or influences prejudicial to morality.

The law of Holland classifies all these dangers into a scientific system and is therefore worthy of quotation at some length:

ARTICLE I. The employment of children under 16 years of age and women is prohibited in the following kinds of work in factories and workshops:

SECTION 1. As regards gearing in motion, in such work as (1) oiling, cleaning, examining and repairing; (2) tightening or repairing driving bands, ropes or chains; (3) putting on or removing such gearing unless the belts are not broader than 2.17 inches, and the person putting them on or removing them does not have to leave the floor.

§ 4. Work in connection with machinery or means of transmitting power run by a motor, unless in every case a distinctly recognizable signal is given before the motor is started.

§ 5. Work in covered furnaces or other inclosed places in which the temperature exceeds 89.6 Fahrenheit.

§ 6. Work in places in which there is less than 5.9 feet of space between the floors on which the work is carried on and parts of machinery in motion that may be dangerous, unless these parts are sufficiently protected according to the judgment of the competent inspector. The section enumerates a number of parts of machinery, motors, and gearing apparatus, such as fly wheels, cogwheels, moving pistons, projecting rods, pulleys, driving bands, windlasses, etc., which shall be considered as dangerous, though the section applies generally to all parts of machinery presenting dangerous features.

§ 7. Work near heavy gearing which, taking into consideration its height, may by falling endanger the employes or near weaving machines the shuttles of which move at a rate of more than 80 times a minute, unless these apparatus are, in the opinion of the competent inspector, protected as far as the nature of the work permits.

§ 8. Work in connection with machines the cutting, rapidly moving, or compressing parts of which present features of danger, such as circular and hand saws; beading, tracing, and planing machines; wood-working machines; machines for cutting straw, paper or rags; metal cutting shears; chopping machines; colanders; cylinders, and all such machines unless they are, in the opinion of the inspector, properly guarded.

§ 9. Work near vats or stationary basins containing hot or corrosive materials or molten metal, or vats placed in the ground, or uncovered wells or reservoirs, so far as they present features of danger, unless they are inclosed by railings 2.95 feet high or otherwise adequately protected.

§ 11. Work in places where use must be made of artificial light during the hours from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m. in order to obtain sufficient light, unless the peculiar state of the atmosphere necessitates the use of such light; where the kinds of work executed comprise embroidery, the preparing of diamonds and other precious stones, gold and silver work, engraving on metal or wood, the making of instruments, type-setting, mechanical knitting, sewing, drawing, stitching, and the making of watches and clocks, unless the light is of at least 15 candle power at a distance of 3.28 feet, or any other work requiring a good light, unless the light is of at least 10 candlepower at a distance of 3.28 feet.

ARTICLE II. The employment of children under 16 years of age and women is also prohibited:

(a) In places where (1) arsenic compounds are manufactured; (2) cyanides containing poison are prepared, employed or given forth; (3) mercury or tin-foil is employed or sublimates or materials containing mercury are prepared; (4) white lead, sugar of lead, minium, or materials containing chromates are prepared; (5) verdigris is prepared; (6) white phosphorous is used; (7) white zinc is prepared; and (8) where deleterious fumes are given forth, such as those from chemical compounds.

(b) In places where the atmosphere is contaminated by powder or dust produced in (1) the making of brushes and brooms; (2) gilding and printing and lithographic establishments; (3) the carding of fibrous materials; (4) the grinding and sifting of lime, cement, stucco and chalk; (5) the slacking of lime; (6) type foundries and stereotype works; (7) typesetting; (8) rag sorting; (9) wool carding; (10) bark grinding; (11) cigar making; (12) dry polishing of metals, glass and other substances; (13) spice grinding and sifting; (14) stonecutting; (15) the manufacture of straw packing; (16) felt making; and (17) the grinding, crushing and hackling of flax and jute, unless the employer within four weeks after receiving a written and dated request from the competent inspector forwards to such officer a certificate from a physician that the physical constitution of the person under 16 years of age or woman, whom it is proposed to employ is such that the work does not subject the person to any particular danger.

Article III. Under no condition can children under 16 years of age, or women be employed (1) in places mentioned under Article II. (a,) unless according to the opinion of the competent inspector, and, if necessary after the advice of a physician has been taken, that no danger of poisoning exists, or if it exists that adequate means are taken to remove it; or (2) in places mentioned under Article II. (b,) unless any power injurious to the health that may be produced is as completely as possible expelled, or when this can not be done in a satisfactory manner, the employés are provided with effective respirators to prevent any injurious effects resulting to them.

Article IV. It is furthermore provided that children under 16 years of age and women shall not be employed in the places mentioned under Article II. (a,) and 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13 of (b,) unless the rooms in which the work is carried on contain a volume of air equal to (1) at least 247.1 cubic feet per employé when the height of the room is 9.84 feet or more; (2) at least that volume per employé in cubic meters which is expressed by the number obtained from the formula when the height of the room is 6.89 feet, but less than 9.84 feet high; and (3) not less than 882.86 cubic feet per employé when the height of the room is less than 6.89 feet.

Among occupations of children in Illinois that have been found by the experience of this department to be injurious to health are certain operations in the manufacture of tobacco, cutlery, glass, wall paper, metal stamping, wood-working, and certain departments in the packing houses, but no complete investigation has been attempted especially for this State.

With due regard to the processes in use in Illinois, and the needs of her industries, a list similar to those above should be incorporated into the statutes and the intention of the present law carried out.

HEALTH OF CHILDREN.

Section 4 of the act approved June 17, 1893, is as follows: "The factory inspector, assistant inspector and deputy inspectors shall have power to demand a certificate of physical fitness from some regular physician of good standing in case of children who may appear to him or her physically unable to perform the labor at which they may be engaged, and shall have power to prohibit the employment of any minor that can not obtain such a certificate." The experience of the department has shown that children have no difficulty in obtaining the certificates without regard to their physical condition. The law is thus completely nullified in its effect and should be amended by providing for the appointment of two staff physicians whose certificates alone should be valid. The necessity of these physicians has been repeatedly emphasized in previous reports; they would be an invaluable addition to the staff in enforcing all sanitary regulations. In connection with the proposed system of granting affidavits it would be possible to scrutinize the children from their first employment and almost completely to prevent them working at trades for which they might be individually unfit. Such system has proved its value in Great Britain and Italy and the New York law also requires a certificate of physical ability from the health officer.

One of the greatest deficiencies in our factory legislation is the absence of any general sanitary provisions. All the leading manufacturing states, including New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota and Missouri, have enacted statutes by which certain sanitary regulations have been placed in the hands of the factory inspectors for enforcement. The New York law is typical of all the others and as its enactment is an urgent need in this State, it is given here in full.

Section 84. Walls and ceilings.—The walls and ceilings of each workroom in a factory shall be lime washed or painted, when in the opinion of the factory inspector it will be conducive to the health and cleanliness of the persons working therein.

Section 85. Size of rooms.—No more employés shall be required or permitted to work in a room in a factory between the hours of six o'clock in the morning and six o'clock in the evening than will allow to each of such employés not less than two hundred and fifty cubic feet of air space; and, unless by a written permit of the factory inspector, nor less than four hundred cubic feet for each employe, so employed between the hours of six o'clock in the evening and six o'clock in the morning, provided such room is lighted by electricity at all times during such hours, while persons are employed therein.

Section 86. Ventilation.—The owner, agent or lessee of a factory shall provide in each workroom thereof proper and sufficient means of ventilation; in case of failure the factory inspector shall order such ventilation to be provided. Such owner, agent or lessee shall provide such ventilation within twenty days after the service upon him of such order, and in case of failure, shall forfeit to the people of the state, ten dollars for each day after the expiration of such twenty days, to be recovered by the factory inspector, in his name of office.

Section 87. Accidents to be reported.—The person in charge of any factory shall report in writing to the factory inspector all accidents or injuries sustained by any person therein, within forty-eight hours after the time of the accident, stating as fully as possible the extent and cause of the injury, and the place where the injured person has been sent, with such other information relative thereto as may be required by the factory inspector who may investigate the cause of such accident, and require such precautions to be taken as will, in his judgment, prevent the recurrence of similar accidents.

Section 88. Wash room and water closets.—Every factory shall contain a suitable, convenient and separate water closet or water closets for each sex, which shall be properly screened, ventilated and kept clean and free from all obscene writing or marking; and also a suitable and convenient wash room. The water closets used by women shall have separate approaches. When women or girls are employed, a dressing room shall be provided for them, when required by the factory inspector.

HOURS OF EMPLOYMENT.

Section 4 of the law of 1897 is as follows: "No person under the age of sixteen years shall be employed, or suffered to work for wages at any gainful occupation more than sixty (60) hours at any one week, nor more than ten (10) hours in any one day." This article, more than any other part of the child-labor law, has proved the necessity for a larger working force. In itself it necessitates special and repeated visits to the factories, workshops and stores and demand that they should be made at the beginning and the close of the day. The demand for four more male inspectors is almost justified by this clause alone, besides being the necessity for the proper enforcement of the other sections and laws now in force. With the adoption of amendments and new legislation which can not long be delayed, this enlargement of the force will become more and more indispensable. New York, whose industries in mercantile establishments are perhaps not twice as numerous as those of Illinois, has a force of fifty inspectors, and an appropriation of $182,000. The present force in this State consists of twelve inspectors and the appropriation is $7,500 per annum. Massachusetts, which is outranked as a manufacturing state by Illinois, has twenty-six inspectors and an appropriation of nearly $100,000. Moreover, the salaries of the Illinois inspectors are far below those of other states; $750 is the salary of the deputy inspectors in Illinois while in Pennsylvania and other leading states, the salary is $1,200.

The practical enforcement of this law with regard to the hours of minors, also demands an additional clause such as has been generally adopted by the other states. It is difficult to conceive of any other means of effective execution. This is a clause requiring that "the employer shall post and keep posted in every room where the employes included by the law are at work, a printed notice stating the number of hours per day required of each person for each day of the week and the number of hours of labor exacted or permitted to be performed by such persons, shall not exceed the number of hours of labor so posted as being required." These are the words of the Indiana law and similar to the laws of the other states.

Enough has been said above to point out the basis for the restriction of the hours of young persons, and accordingly the principal manufacturing states have adopted legislation limiting the hours of employment of minors under eighteen in manufacturing and other employments. New York, Pennsylvania and Michigan place the limit at sixty hours per week, Massachusetts puts it at fifty-eight and New Jersey and Ohio at fifty-five. Of the six leading manufacturing states Illinois alone allows minors under eighteen years of age to work more than ten hours a day in her factories; and it has become urgent for the future and prosperity and reputation of the State that it should enact a similar law. The period of ten hours per day or sixty per week is long enough to be no hindrance to the great majority of our industries, while a longer working day than this is sure permanently to lower the working efficiency of the generation now approaching maturity. Many official investigations both in this country and abroad have decided upon the wisdom and sound policy of such a step and the experience of this department is in entire accord with their conclusions.

Great Britain, France, Belgium, Norway and Sweden are now enforcing similar laws. The limitation of the hours of minors under eighteen to sixty per week is the most important of all these recommendations on the subject of child-labor. That it would be entirely constitutional is seen from the present law limiting the hours of minors under sixteen and from the remark voluntarily offered by the supreme court in Ritchie vs. The People, "We do not wish to be understood by anything herein said as holding that section 5 would be invalid if it were limited in its turn to females who are minors."

EDUCATION AND CHILD LABOR.

It has been repeatedly urged by this department that some standard of literacy should be required from children under sixteen years of age previous to their employment. New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Ohio and Indiana require an ability to read and write English. As many states require evidence of school attendance and Ohio provides that inspectors are to have the powers of truant officers. Such enactments, together with an improved compulsory educational law, are much needed in this State. The New York inspectors report the most gratifying success of its law in raising the literacy of the children of newly arrived immigrants, among whom there was previously found a widespread ignorance of the simplest elements of the English language.
